

SOCIOLOGY: URBAN SOCIOLOGY, BA

The Sociology major helps students identify and explain patterns of social life and human behavior by emphasizing how large-scale social phenomena (such as class, race, and gender inequality) affect the everyday experiences of individuals and vice versa. The major prepares students for a career in a variety of fields such as law, medicine and healthcare, marketing, education, scholarly and applied social research, social work, demography, journalism and media, management in the public and private sectors, administration, and government. The program offers comprehensive advising and significant research and independent study opportunities. Our program is dedicated to nurturing a strong community of scholars, helping them grow academically and professionally under the large-scale mission of the College of Arts & Sciences.

Neighborhoods, cities, and metropolitan areas are communities defined by geographic, economic, legal, political, cultural, and social boundaries. The characteristics distinguishing urban areas that affect social interactions include density of concentration of residents and firms-relative homogeneity in ethnicity, class, education, language, and income of neighbors; shared representations, such as sports teams; common meeting places and facilities, such as churches, schools, clubs, restaurants, and businesses; and facilities of communication and transportation. How does the configuration of urban areas affect opportunities for employment, education, health, and safety? What shapes the interactions within and across neighborhoods? Why are jobs suburbanizing? Why are neighborhoods and schools segregated by race, ethnicity, and income?

The minimum total course units (<https://www.college.upenn.edu/credits-needed-major>) for graduation in this major is 34. Double majors may entail more course units.

A minimum of 11 course units must be in Sociology.
